

Brooksville Hernando Web Museum

Brooksville Hernando Web Museum

The new Brooksville Hernando Web Museum that launched in August is a virtual collection of historic photos, stories and videos that local avid history buff Virginia Bensen hopes will attract participation from local residents.

Bensen stated, "creating an interactive virtual museum, was probably the best way to present historic materials that don't duplicate what already are available through other public sources, such as the Heritage Museum and the Brooksville Historical Train Depot".

You ask, "What is a Pop-Up Museum?" It is exactly what the name implies. It is a type of museum that may pop-up anywhere you want to be. The pop-up museum is very temporary, and these are very informal. This type of museum sometimes shows small exhibits or it can be display objects, photos, or ask people to bring these objects and talk about them.

Stay tuned...for the next Pop-Up Exhibit. It's a great day to share your stories of photos of past Brooksville events and activities that your remember most. We can sit and chat, and most of all - let's share your stories. And don't forget to bring a photo to share.

Most of all, the pop-up museum encourages conversation and exchanges of ideas.

For more information, please visit:

www.brooksvillehernandowebmuseum.com

Contact Email Form:

http://www.brooksvillehernandowebmuseum.com/contact_us.html